Virgin Queen (VGQ)

The nine wins in the preliminaries went to the Holy Roman (3), Protestant (2), England (2), France (1), and Ottoman (1) players.

In the first semifinal, Manuel Bravo pushed England to 25 VP in just three turns. Kirk Harris, who had just missed a Spanish Gunpowder Plot win in the 2014 Final, redeemed this strategy in the second semifinal. The last semifinal was won by Roger Whitney, who was able to steer the Protestants to a win on VP.

The Final power selection was as follows: Bravo (HRE), Whitney (England), Harris (Protestant), David Kieffe (Ottoman), Matthew Beach (France), and Justin Rice (Spain). The French jumped out to the lead after two turns (22 VP) using a series of diplomatic deals to seal all five Valois marriages. England was the next threat to win, falling only one VP short on the third turn (after losing a VP in a disastrous marriage). Suddenly, on the last turn the Catholic religious defenses broke down. France was trying to hold on with a low-card Gouvernante de France strategy and Spain was busy after two turns spent invading the HRE (due to a diplomatic feud) and pursuing a Gunpowder Plot in England. With nothing to hold down the Protestant space count, Kirk raced to a Protestant religious victory. After three previous runner-up finishes in the HIS and VGQ tournaments, Kirk Harris proved that it is actually the fourth time that's the charm and took home his first shield.

War at Sea (WAS)

A rising tide brought a reinforced field that logged 86 games with the Allies winning half against 37 losses and six ties. The favorite opening Allied move remained Barents on Turn 1. The Best Axis Player was Bob Hamel (4-2-1) and Vince Meconi earned Best Allied Player honors (5-0). Greg Smith was our Sportsmanship nominee and Chet Makuch Rookie of the Year.

All seven playoff games featured 2.0 Allied bids. In the quarterfinals, the top seeded Vince Meconi (5-0) quickly dispatched #8 Ray Freeman's Axis on the opening turn by sinking six Axis ships while winning the opening battle for the South Atlantic. #7 Bob Hamel's Axis evened the score for the Axis by maxing out vs. #2 Ben Gardner. #4 Bruce Monnin's Allies cruised to a 7-POC victory over #5 Charlie Drozd who lost his entire U-Boat fleet on Turn 1. #3 Dennis Nicholson's Allies defeated #6 Rob Drozd. Both of the ensuing semifinal margins were four POC, but with opposite results: Hamel's Axis stopped Monnin, while Nicholson's Allies ended Meconi's perfect day.

Hamel then defeated Nicholson in the closest Final the tournament has seen in 25 years. Despite battles in the Barents on three of the first four turns, the POC marker hovered near zero all game. Bob's Axis disabled Dennis' convoy with the last die roll of the game, preserving a tie. By rule, a playoff tie is an Axis victory, giving Bob his first WAS shield.

War of the Ring (WOR)

The last quest for Middle Earth at the Lancaster Host moved to the second weekend of the convention and benefited with 22 participants and increased availability of eliminators in the single elimination rounds. 23 games were played with 15 Shadow wins (12 military, three corruption) and eight Free People wins (three military, five ring dunks). Five of the Shadow military victories occurred in the closing rounds. Three dwarven rings was the most bid with many games having zero bid.

The Final pit the usual suspects, past champs Chris Trimmer as the FP with three Dwarven Rings vs Kevin Wojtaszczyk's SP. Some key card plays pushed the action with Rage of Dunlendings mustering units to assault the Grey Havens and Horde from the East to support DEW assaults. A Power too Great had to be discarded with the red eye special tile card and a Day Without Dawn card so the elven fortress could be captured. An epic Help Unlooked For battle of reinforced Dale units assaulting the sieging Woodland forces came down to single combat with one orc left standing. The Ents killed Saruman but not before all of Rohan fell while the Corsairs could not onslaught vs Aragorn in Dol Amroth. Frodo reached Mordor as a pieced together force finally took Erebor and a final FP die attack into Edoras ended in mutual destruction rather than costing Kevin his tenth VP—thus giving Kevin's Shadow the military victory—and he his fourth WOR shield.

Warriors of God (WOG)

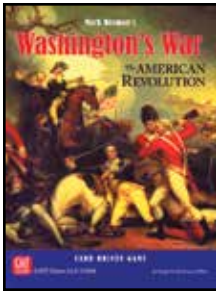

Ten contested the Mulligan round with Greg Hultgren, David Long, Terry Coleman, Peter Stein and Derek Landel earning Round 1 byes. Terry scored the sole English win of the round. 16 battled in Round 1 including four mulligan returnees. Michael Ussery, David Long, Phillip Yaure, Marty Sample and Martin Villemaire earned English wins while Paul Martz, Derek Pulhamus and Robert Woodson won with France.

Pulhamus and Sample won easy English victories in the quarterfinals, while Hultgren and Landel won with the French. Landel required a tiebreaker to edge Yaure. Landel had an easier time of it in the semifinals as his English forced a Pulhamus concession in four turns.

Derek bid 3 to play the English in the Final vs the defending champ. Greg's French grabbed Normandy on Turn 1 to slow the traditional English march on Paris. This succeeded in delaying the siege of Paris until Turn 3. Derek used the initiative to launch two attacks much to his liking but the French prevailed in both battles (an 11% possibility). This gave the French a modest leader advantage as they built their core and racked up over 20 VP. With a French auto victory appearing imminent, fate intervened. In the last five turns, French leaders began dropping like flies. The English began to disassemble the French core, which by the last turn was half its prior size, though their VP lead remained intact till game end allowing Greg to retain his title.

Washington's War (WWR)

The tournament's traditional "marathon" format remained unchanged. Happily, attendance was up considerably with a 25% increase over last year's large downturn. There were four rounds of Swiss play to select eight quarterfinalists to advance to the elimination rounds. The five undefeated players after the first three rounds (Wixson, Birnbaum, Pei, Leader and Mountford) all received a bye in Round 4 and advanced automatically. There were four players with 3-1 records after Round 4 (Young, Faella and Doughan advanced while Derek Landel was eliminated by tiebreaker). Out of 62 games played, the Brits won 32, but in the elimination rounds the Americans won four of seven.

Keith Wixson became the fourth three-time champ in the event's 22 year history by besting Marvin Birnbaum to go 6-0 while winning three games with each side.

The Final was more of a positional game and a relatively bloodless affair, with all but one of the few battles the result of a large British army stomping on a 1 or 2 strength American force. One of the advantages of a British Mid-Atlantic/Southern Strategy is that Washington can be made irrelevant, and that was certainly the case in this game. There was very little open space for the Americans in the South, and it was just too risky to bring the Continental Army down to fight it out. The Brits built up a considerable PC edge early and it was just too much for the Americans to overcome.

Waterloo (WAT)

PC We celebrated the bicentennial of the battle of Waterloo with the most balanced tournament ever as each side split 30 games despite, or perhaps because of, the absence of the "perennial" champions. Neither of the Beymas or Joe Beard were a factor in 2015. With the pathway open to the title, the four semifinalists were Ray Clark, Tim Miller, Greg Smith, and Ed Menzel.

In semifinal #1, Ray Clark marshaled the PAA vs. Tim Miller. Tim's French campaign featured aggressive and successful low-odds attacks on 16 June. However on 17 June, Tim's luck vanished in several exchanges against Ray's doubled defenders, breaking the back of the French Army. Tim quickly went into exile. Semifinal #2 had event newcomer but WBC regular Greg Smith returning to the exploits of his youth as the French vs Ed Menzel. Greg maneuvered Ed's PAA off the Quatre Bras heights early while an intense battle of maneuver highlighted the 17th in the board center. The 18th saw general offensives by both armies with the French taking the field.

The Final was highlighted by Ray's French forcing the PAA off the Quatre Bras heights with some lucky low odds attacks. On the 17th, they outmaneuvered and outfought the Prussian Army along the Dyle River while the British Army sat idle near Nivelles. Greg could not react quickly enough to his flank being turned and with the road to Brussels open, he conceded—earning Ray his first WAT shield.

Wilderness War (WNW)

The Mulligan format was again well received with increased participation. The Tuesday Mulligan drew 16 players with four losers returning the following morning to play in Round 1. The French won 56% of the games played. There were three unbeaten after three rounds; Keith Wixson, George Young and the unseeded Doug Smith. Smith lost to an Eliminator (LaDue) in Round 4, turning the Wixson/Young game into a Final.

By late '59 Young's French position was critical. The British had places to score VPs (Ohio Forks, Crown Point and Montreal), while the French had none other than raids so Young marched Montcalm into Amherst's rear. With his supply line threatened, Wixson had to send Amherst south to meet Montcalm as he entered New York. With Murray now free to retake Ohio Forks and the lead, Young needed a VP. He attacked Amherst at Poughkeepsie, losing the second major battle of the game (VPs to BR1). After getting a late successful raid, Young tried one last low odds desperation attack by Montcalm on Amherst but lost the second battle of Poughkeepsie (VPs to BR2). Murray retook the Forks to bring VPs to BR3. The final score was BR2 after accounting for the one successful French raid for the year.

Wixson won his third WNW shield in a very unusual game with two major battles fought at Poughkeepsie. The keys were Murray's epic Fabian retreat from the outskirts of Niagara to Virginia and the lost French VPs at Oswegatchie and HCN.

Wooden Ships & Iron Men (WSM)

PC The event continued its grognard renaissance with 60 games logged on the high seas. Alex Slate led the field in nail biters. He earned a draw with Nick Chepaitis, each player scoring 19 damage points, edged Andy Davison 44 to 42, and fought eventual champ Jeff Miller to a draw when both ships struck simultaneously! Saturday's Fleet Action was a showdown inspired by the Battle of Minorca. Six players began the battle. Two more entered as reinforcements. Best captain awards went to Alex Slate (French) and Nick Chepaitis (British).

The semifinals offered player's choices of American, British, or French frigates. The most anticipated match paired Ron Glass and Jeff Miller, who faced each other in the two previous Finals with Ron emerging triumphant both times. Jeff's Yanks reversed that trend this year, outfighting Ron's Brits, and denying Ron the hat trick. In the other bracket, Rod Coffey met Nick Chepaitis in their first playoff appearance. Both chose the British with Nick ganging up on one of Rod's ships for the win.

The finalists had very different backgrounds. Nick was the youngest finalist ever. Jeff had seen far more action, including 14 games during the week while posting a record of 11-2-1. Unbeknownst to each other, both chose the Dutch squadron of a 76, and 74 and two 68 gun ships of the line, all with crack crews for the Final. Jeff prevailed by taking two of Nick's ships while losing one.

World at War (WAW)

The event had four games recreating WWII in both theaters, and two games recreating it only in Europe. Three of the two-theater games began with starting positions that resulted from playing the recently published Gathering Storm which covers the pre-war period from 1935 to 1939+, and allows for ahistorical economic, military and naval development, diplomacy and aggression.

A few rules changes resulted from the convention games. The Western Allies can no longer pull the transports from the SW box. In compensation, they will always be able to use some of the transports, even if all are inverted.

The US Election rules following a British surrender are not often invoked, but this year they were. It was decided that the game is more interesting if no U.S. election is held if Britain (or Russia) surrenders. U.S. re-entry is too slow to affect the outcome of the game. To go along with this change, British units can be built in Canada following a British surrender (since there is often no place to build them in Britain, once Britain re-enters the war.)

One rule change arose from the classic WAW global game, in which a British Task Force in the Indian Ocean was used to protect supply to Singapore in Winter 1941. Use of any units other than transports in the Pacific theater IO box are prohibited on the DOW turn now, as part of the Allied Unpreparedness rules.

THE LAST YEARBOOK

2016 is the start of a wondrous new age for WBC with a nod to enhanced amenities and increased attractions for a wonderful annual family vacation at Seven Springs Mountain Resort. However welcome this evolution may be, it does not come without cost and one of the sacrifices that makes it possible is the discontinuation of the printed yearbook.

While highly valued by a minority of the membership, the Yearbook can no longer be justified given the increased expense of subsidized lodging costs for our new venue. A benchmark of required elite membership levels required to continue the book has not been met as of this printing, so in all probability this will be the last WBC yearbook for the foreseeable future.

However, this will not be the end of tournament reports. Our pre- and post-con event coverage will continue on our website and will be augmented with the continued makeover of the website with a new look. The 2016 event previews are just the first phase of a planned upgrade of our extensive website and the archives which record the evolution of its traditions. In a move that is long overdue, we hope to enhance our internet presence by reducing the time and effort devoted to print media.

The website has many advantages over the printed page including, but not limited to: cost of creation, distribution, archiving, error correction, timeliness, links to relevant information and greater access to users worldwide. The web also offers much greater depth of coverage and convenience at a fraction of the cost of the printed page. Consequently, we have decided at long last to concentrate our media efforts and resources on our website.

WBC remains dedicated to providing the best pre- and post-con event coverage of any gaming convention. That will not change. Only the medium by which we bring that information to you will change—and hopefully it will evolve at a faster pace without the requirement for separate editing, printing and mailing of a different media format that is embraced by a lower percentage of the membership with each passing year.
